No games scheduled. By WILLIAM B. HANNA.

With one or two trifling exceptions everybody on the New York side was better than his rival on the Cub side at the Polo Grounds yesterday after-Cubs not only were not good but they were bad. They couldn't field and they couldn't hit. The Giants did both well and 16,000 persons saw them play loops, hoops and ellipses around the Cubs. The on has the fans coming out fast.

The greatest difference in individual positions between the two teams was in the pitchers. Zabel and Pierce were reduced to inutility by the Giants. Zabel lasted until the fourth inning and Pierce until the eighth. Both fell under a broadside of hits. Marquard for New York, than whom none is greater as a reversal of form pitcher, reverted to his hest form and entities.

It popped from his hands and Meyers pounded to second. Robertson went to third and while Fisher was clawing for the ball, thrown to him by Zim to collar Meyers, he (Robertson) dashed for home. He was rushing to sure destruction, but escaped that fave and made a run because Fisher threw wild to Archer.

A change to good fielding followed this slatternly eruption. Phelan made a fine stop of Murray's stab and Meyers was run down between third and home, Murray taking second. The Cubs were moribund quadrupeds from the time of Davey's thermal thump, and besides early in the game their chief, Roger Bresnahan, was set upon and silenced by Bill Klem. between in spite of Dell's half dozen bases on balls. Except in the second inning, when Cincinnati scored, not a runner got as far as second till the seventh. Otto Miller killed off three stealers at the midway. After the seventh Dell had no reason to exert himself unduly. Benton lost control in this inning with two out. He gave four bases on balls, the last of which forced in a run. Then Myers tripled with the bases crowded. edge ball for seven innings to-day the Torontos blew up in the eighth and by mixing a couple of wild throws with a pair of Indian hits enabled the Redmen to score three runs, enough to win the game.

Up to the eighth there had been a good battle between Al Schacht for the locals and Gene Cocreham for the visitors. But in the eighth Manager Clymer sent Luque in to bat for Gene, a strikeout being the result. The change proved bad, for after Clymer's men had tied the score in that inning, he had to send Pitcher Blancke in to finish the game. The latter was a mark and his team as-

SKEETERS SHIFT SUCCEEDS.

Bues Benched, While Tamm Goe to Third and Turner to Short. Jersey City balanced accounts with Buffalo in yesterday's game at West Side Park by handing the Donovan herd a 9 to 1 defeat.

A shift in the Jersey City lineup proved successful, Bues being benched for Tamm at third and Turner filling in at short. The score: at short. The score:
